Maria stronghold in 's-Hertogenbosch

Anticipating the climate when restoring monumental fortresses

A careful handover of our built heritage to future generations, that is the mission of Nico de Bont. Every day, our enthusiastic professionals work on restoring, reallocating, transforming, and preserving dozens of historic buildings in a large part of the Netherlands.

The Netherlands has a rich history when it comes to water. Without our dikes, half the Netherlands would be under water. Water has had an important role in times of war as well. Our fortified heritage expert team is dedicated to the restoration of monuments that are in or near water.

The restoration of fortresses and fortified elements is an excellent opportunity to use these monuments as accelerators on many different levels. As a characteristic landmarks in urban developments, and as drivers for climate adaptation, energy transition, and biodiversity.

Transplantation of the 16th century fortress wall

The reconstruction of the Maria Bolwerk in 's-Hertogenbosch is a perfect example, where a rainwater storage and settlement basin are part of the project. The basin can be used to temporarily store dirty water in the event of extreme rainfall. The same applies to the conversion of the Geofort in Hervijnen, where a helophyte filter has been installed to purify the dirty water. And for the restoration of the city walls in Zaltbommel, where the greatest effort has been made to preserve and develop rare flora and fauna.

Restoration experts of fortresses and fortifications

" We believe in vital heritage sites, being actively used and being prepared for the climate to come. For the future of our past. "

EFFORTS

EFFORTS is the European network organisation established in 2017 to share knowledge and practical expertise on military heritage, such as walled towns, forts and defence lines. The basis for EFFORTS was laid during the final conference of the At Fort Interreg IVC project in Suomenlinna, Helsinki (Finland 2014) and international conferences on military heritage in 's-Hertogenbosch (Netherlands 2016), Berlin-Spandau Zitadelle (Germany 2017), Venice (Italy 2018), Antwerp (Belgium 2019) and Oudenaarde (Belgium 2020). Today EFFORTS unites more than 150 European fortified sites and networks in 23 countries and is growing.

Since 2018 EFFORTS has been a European professional representation of fortified sites. It is member of the Europa Nostra managed European Heritage Alliance 3.3. Today EFFORTS' main mission is the structuring of European cooperation and keeping military fortified heritage on the European policy agenda. EFFORTS believes that European cooperation is the key to achieving its goals. Any local or regional authority and any person actively engaged in the protection and re-use of military heritage at European, national, regional or local level is welcome to join EFFORTS. The EFFORTS' aim is to enhance structural European cooperation and coordination, to share expertise, to promote personal cooperation and to put fortified heritage on the agenda as a permanent link with our common European history. This in order to make a sustainable contribution to Europe's economic, energy, spatial development and social challenges.
